DISCOVERIES IN AFRICA. All accounts from Dr. Livingstone prove commendable and admirable spirit. One of his latest discoveries known to the scientific public, is a magnificent lake, compared with which, Lake Ngami is a mere pond. It is called Lake Shirwa, and is located one hundred miles up the River Shire, and about two thousand feet above the level of the sea. It is twenty or thirty miles wide, and he tween fifty and sixty long. He represents the district of the Shire and Shirwa Valleys as abounding in cotton: he never saw anywhere so much of it grown. The River Shire is navigable to within thirty miles of Lake Shirwa, and perhaps the time may come when a profitable trade can be carried on in this stable of this favored land. The Doctor finds himself unable to prosecute his explo rations without a more powerful steamer than the fragile one bitherto employed on the Zambesi, and has appealed to his friends in England for aid.

This magnificent planet is now rapidly so proaching that position in relation to the earth and sun, in which it presents its finest aspect to us. Being one of the superior planets, which revolve in orbits exterior to the earth, it is, of course, nearer the earth, in opposition than in conjunction by the distance across the earth's orbit, viz: two hundred million of miles. Beside this, it shines all night, rising about sunset, and blotte-i out by the dawn, while yet several degrees from its setting. The present position of the planet is in the constellation Gemini, or the Twins, not far from the meridian of Sirius, the brightest of the fixed stars, and closely preceded by the finest constellation in all the heavens, Orion; so that we have and shall have throughout the Winter, in juxtaposition, the nightly company of this splendid galaxy-Jupiter, in his brightest, Sirius or the Greater Dog, Capella, Castor and Pollux, Procyon, or the Little Dog, Aldebaran, and the unrivalled constellation of Orion,
